

Consider the Nails

If you think your life is worth nothing,
If you feel unimportant and small,
If you wonder if anyone loves you,
Then remember the One who gave all.

Consider the nails.
Consider the thorns.
See the water and blood flow free from the wound in His side.
Consider the jeers.
Consider the pain.
Consider all that it takes to give in to the way that He died.
Then consider the nails.

If you doubt there's a God up in heaven,
Or a father who would give up his son,
If you're mired in guilt and confusion,
Then remember what's already been done.

He stretched out His arms,
And accepted the point of the pain.
He bore the weight of the wood,
Like a lamb and a king in the rain.
